CAREERS IN DESIGN:

TURN CREATIVITY INTO A FUTURE

Design is everywhere – in the clothes we wear, the apps we use on our phones, the posters on our school walls, and even the furniture and buildings around us. Good design makes life easier, more beautiful, and more enjoyable. If you enjoy creativity, art, imagination, and solving visual problems, a career in design could be perfect for you.

Design means planning with purpose. Designers think about what people need and then create something useful, beautiful, and meaningful. There are many kinds of design careers that school students can explore:

- Graphic Designer: Creates posters, logos, banners, magazines, and digital artwork.
- UX/UI Designer: Designs apps and websites to make them easy and enjoyable to use.
- Fashion Designer: Creates clothing and accessories that people want to wear.
- Interior Designer: Plans how rooms, homes, and public spaces look and feel.
- Product Designer: Invents everyday products like toys, bikes, furniture, and gadgets.

You don't need to wait until college to start exploring design. School is the perfect place to discover what kind of design excites you. Joining art and craft clubs, participating in poster-making or logo competitions, trying digital design tools like Canva or Adobe Spark, and creating your own small projects can help you develop skills and discover your passion.

After school, students can pursue design through courses like Bachelor of Design (B.Des), diplomas in graphic design, UX/UI certification programs, or degrees in fashion and interior design. Many designers also work as freelancers, build online portfolios, or even start their own studios.

Design is not just about making things look good – it's about solving problems and improving lives. Designers communicate ideas visually, create experiences people enjoy, and constantly innovate.
